About Karine

Not your typical engineer™, Karine Leblanc is passionate about helping engineers step up their leadership skills by learning how to build lasting relationships, communicate effectively and become an influencer without relying on any title.

Like you, Karine has been exposed to the good and the bad of leadership over the last two decades. She uses her experience to teach and impact her peers by speaking as a distinguished lecturer for ASHRAE all over the world. Karine values real-life stories and conversational connections with her audience making everyone feel like they matter.

Speaking Topics

- EQ is the new IQ: how to use emotional intelligence to become a better person professionally and personally
- Everyone communicates, few connect: How to have better relationships, experience less conflict, and increase your influence
- Leadership Lessons: How to become the best leader that everyone wants to work with
- Growth doesn't just happen, you need to be intentional: How personal growth can help you become a more successful and accomplished person.

Karine is a phenomenal communicator, educator, and leader. She has a naturally motivating personality and she brings the best out of those around her. Karine has a gift for distilling complex interpersonal dynamics into actionable cues and methods for people to implement in her presentations

- Zachary Alderman, P.E., M.S.

What we loved about Karine's virtual speech was her energy, thoughts, and the great examples she uses to make her suggested actions sink in. she was really good at connecting, not just communicating, with everyone in the session and she made us feel that she is present in our rooms (although it was a virtual event)

- Ahmed Abdel-Salam, Senior Mechanical Eng
